Adjo Eudyce Anago

Extended Care Coordinator / Paraprofessional

Hello my name is Adjo Eudyce Anago.

I was born and raised in Benin, which is a country in west Africa. I graduated with a bachelor of science in food technology from the University of Benin.

I then went on to pursue a second bachelor in food quality management and then a masters in food quality and safety in food processing from the University of Aix Marseille.

During my time in France I had the opportunity to work for the "Association de la Fondation Etudiante pour la Ville" a french National Education program that aimed to accompany young children in discovering the benefit of reading, by creating various fun activities that were focused on particular books and by fostering an environment that was conducive to learning reading and having fun. I served as a book ambassador and as such I was in charge of the book club. I enjoyed my work there as I could see the impact of my work in helping those kids become more interested in reading.

During my free time I enjoy spending time with my family whether it be going on a family trip or going to the movies. I also enjoy reading cooking and traveling.
